Prove that there exist a natural number  $k > 1$  so that  $p^k$  is an element of the subgroup generated by  $p$ . My idea: If  $p=1$ , then the result is trivial. Therefore, suppose  $p \neq 1$ . Since  $p$  is also a natural number, say that  $p$  is congruent to  $1$  modulo  $k$  for some positive integer  $k$ . If  $p$  is congruent to  $1$  modulo  $k$  for some integer  $k \in \mathbb{N}$ , then the result is trivial. Otherwise,  $k$  is congruent to  $1$  modulo  $p$ . (I'm not sure about this step, I'd appreciate any comment). Therefore,  $k \cdot p \in \mathbb{N}$  can be written as  $k \cdot p \equiv 1 \pmod{p}$ , and the result follows. But I feel my solution is not rigorous. Is this kind of proof correct? Thanks! A: your proof is essentially correct, I would write your second sentence as  $k \cdot p$  is congruent to  $1 \pmod{p}$ , since  $p$  is prime  $k \cdot p$  can be written as a multiple of  $p$  only if it is congruent to  $1$  modulo  $p$ , thus we can let  $k=p-1$  so that  $p^k$
